EXAMINER'S AMENDMENT

1. An examiner's amendment to the record appears below. Should the changes and/or additions be unacceptable to applicant, an amendment may be filed as provided by 37 CFR 1.312. To ensure consideration of such an amendment, it MUST be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee.

Authorization for this examiner's amendment was given in a communication with John G. Chupa (Reg. No. 33,483) on 13/30/06. The application has been amended as follows:

In claim 1, "A metal stud cutter comprising a first support member; a stud reception member which is perpendicularly attached to the first support member; and a handle member which is attached to the first support member and which includes a pair of severing members." has been changed to

--A cutter comprising a first support member having a first thick portion and a second thicker portion, side first support member having a first longitudinal axis of symmetry;

a metal stud reception portion which has a rectangular cross sectional area, said metal stud portion is coupled to said second thicker portion and has a second longitudinal axis of symmetry which is perpendicular to said first longitudinal axis of symmetry, said metal stud reception portion having first and second opposed ends and further includes first and second substantially identical feet respectively coupled to the first and second opposed ends, said first and second feet are perpendicular to the second longitudinal axis of symmetry;

a serpentine-shaped handle having a third thick portion which is movably coupled to the first thick portion and a forth hand held thick portion which projects substantially above and away from the first support member;

said cutter further comprises first and second substantially identical cutting members, each of the first and second cutting members includes a substantially L-shaped sharp edged engagement member which at one end is movably attached to the third thick portion of the serpentine handle and the at other end pivotally attached to the first support member, said substantially L-shaped sharp edged engagement member of the first cutting member is operatively positioned along a first side of the stud reception member and the substantially L-shaped sharp edged engagement member of the second cutting member is positioned along a second side opposite to the first side of the stud reception member, and wherein a downward movement of the forth thick portion of the serpentine handle towards the first thick portion of the first support member causing the first and second cutting members to move downwardly toward the second thicker portion, thereby causing the first and second cutting members to simultaneously move together, thereby allowing the substantially identical L-shaped shaped sharp edged engagement members to cooperatively and selectively cut a metal stud as the substantially L-shaped engagement members move toward one another.--.

Claims 2-8 and 12-15 have been cancelled.

Reasons for Allowance

2. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: The claim is allowable because prior art fails to teach that the first and second identical cutting members are respectively positioned on first and second opposite sides of the stud reception member, and the cutting members having a substantially L-shaped sharp edged engagement members which each at one end is attached to a third thick portion of a serpentine-shaped handle and at other end attached to the first support member, as set forth in claim 1.

Regarding the claim, Bushaw (1,850,314), Mendenhall (634,304), or Maillez (4,625,607) teaches a cutter including a first support member, a handle, first and second cutting members, and a stud reception member. However, Bushaw, Mendenhall, and Maillez fails to teach that the first and second identical cutting members are respectively positioned on first and second opposite sides of the stud reception member, and the cutting members having a substantially L-shaped sharp edged engagement members which each at one end is attached to a third thick portion of a serpentine-shaped handle and at other end attached to the first support member, as set forth in claim 1.

None of these references by themselves or in combination with the other prior art cited teach the claimed invention set forth in claim 1.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
